Gratitude For Our Home

A housing development company was building homes on our street, and the construction workers liked to play music as they worked. They would play their music at full blast so that you could hear it all over the neighborhood. But when we were inside with the windows and doors shut, we couldn't hear the music at all.

During the Texas freeze of February 11-20, 2021, the entire neighborhood lost power for 3 days. We didn't have a generator, and went in and out of the house quite often, but the temperature of the house didn't drop below 65°F.

The house also lost power for 24 hours on June 21, 2023, due to a storm. It was 95°F outside with a heat index of 108°F, but the house stayed below 82°F.

Another bonus is that we can still cook even if the power goes out because we have a gas range. (You need to use a lighter to light it)
